Buenos Aires, Argentina

Buenos Aires is one of Latin America's most attractive destinations for international events, thanks to its connectivity, cosmopolitan identity, and dynamic cultural environment. The city combines history, innovation, gastronomy, and an intense social life, offering a comprehensive experience for participants from across the region and around the world.

Its international airport ensures excellent connectivity with major regional and international markets. In this context, hosting the APLA Annual Meeting in Buenos Aires is particularly timely, at a moment when the development of Vaca Muerta and regional mining projects are emerging as strategic milestones with a high impact on the future of the Latin American petrochemical and chemical industry.
